Institutional Distinctiveness

Imparting value added education has become must for the thorough development of students. In this regard, our Institutional Distinctiveness is 'Weekly Prayer and Dress Code' for all students and staff, plays vital role. It makes all aware of the duties and responsibilities towards the nation, constitution and culture.

Dress code brings a sense of equality. We have been conducting weekly prayer in our college since 1982.

Weekly Prayer of our college is not about any religion. It is our inspiring national anthem. This gathers all in our college and makes them fresh, energetic and start the day with positive vibration.

For its rigorous implementation, we form a special 'Discipline and Prayer Committee'. It arranges weekly prayer on every Thursday. All the students, teaching and non-teaching staff gather in the dress code, in a disciplinary way on the college ground. Important announcements and instructions are given here. As well, students and staff members are felicitated by the principal for their successful achievements. Tributes are also paid here on the death of great personalities. Besides, one or two students present their meditative views on social issues. This provoke the students and staff to think seriously about those issues. NCC cadet gives order to sing the National Anthem. Such prayer refreshes the mood of all the participants.

This inculcates a kind of moral values among the students. It also encourages the stage-daring, confidence and expression skill of the students. Thus, our Weekly Prayer has proved itself as the unique device to achieve multiple objectives – administrative, academic and cultural too.

We realize that Dress Code has become the central key for respectable appearance and an imperative way to discover the route to self-respect and self-confidence. It also brings a sense of responsibility among the students. In educational institutions such steps eradicate any type of discrimination. In our college, students come from various types of socio-economical backgrounds. But dress code brings a sense of belongingness and makes the students to feel united. It is the easiest way to recognize the students' educational background. In a present sensitive scenario, we feel and take care of the students not to be affected with any disparities. That's why, both, the Weekly Prayer and Dress Code are our institutional distinctiveness.
